

POP PROOFS: Justice love and truth

JUSTICE:

It is unjust to condemn someone for a crime they had no choice in committing.

No trespassing signs must be posted where they can be seen. If the only water in 100 miles is within that zone, is justice served by prosecuting the offense if the signs are not properly posted or the population is illiterate?

And if a way across the no-trespass zone is granted 10 years after the condemned person dies, was the same justice served to them?

And if that person could not read signs or if someone told them it said 'come this way' are they still worthy of condemnation?

Is God still just if He claims to have offered salvation through Jesus but some never heard, some never saw the signs, some died before God fulfilled the offer, some were lied to about what that offer was.

God is only just if everyone can benefit by the salvation He offers in Jesus Christ. Time, lies, ignorance, or necessity cannot be mitigating factors to God's offer. If God is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent He must be able to account for those factors in any offer He makes. Anything less would make Him just a god and not the Creator God.

He did! God is just. Salvation in Hell is the revelation of how God has prepared for these contingencies. This proves that Jesus can be the saviour of everyone. Including those who died in ignorance of Him and His offer, those who were lied to and those who seemed to have no choice but to reject Him.

TRUTH:

If one part of a statement can be verified as false then the entire statement is false.

If one aspect of the Bible can be proven false then the rest of it cannot be the truth.

Jesus said "I am the (only) way the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father but by me" John 14:6

If God is just then for this to be a true statement it must be possible for every soul to accept that offer.

They do not have to but it must be possible. Otherwise either God is not just or Jesus is not the only way to salvation and the Bible itself is false.

LOVE:

1 Corinthians 13:4

"Love suffers long, does not seek its own, bears and hopes all things. Love never fails."

God allowed (suffered) sin on the possibility that He could redeem us.

Jesus allowed Satan to tempt Him and even to touch Him by carrying Him to the Temple.

Jesus allowed the cross and sin and death and Hell to touch Him. Why? To fulfill the risk God had taken that some of us would receive His renewed offer of love and fellowship – to be restored to Him.

Without suffering, love would have failed. In Hell Jesus finished with suffering, so love extends all the way there. His love extends through time, through suffering, through sin, through death and Hell.

Everything is covered with His suffering and His blood.
